Out & About in Birmingham

Hurst Street, Birmingham

Chic Bar, Gay Village

Whilst only open two days out of the week, Chic has still managed a great reputation for its party atmosphere and slamming DJ nights. Whilst tucked away from the footfall of Hurst Street, Chic is a raucous Birmingham club that still manages to see the party hordes come flocking thanks to their urban-chic decor and trendy VIP booths.

The Loft Bar, Gay Village

From champagne afternoon tea in Birmingham to buzzing DJ nights on a Saturday, The Loft Lounge is a cool split between party venue and dining destination. From their black ceiling chandeliers and wood log fires, to slick dining tables and grand beer garden, The Loft Lounge is a contender for one of the glitziest bars on Hurst Street.

Missing Bar, Gay Village

Missing is dedicated to one thing: partying! One of the city's smaller venues, its small size just means a more intimate, boisterous personality, with tonnes of attitude in everything from its DJ nights to drag shows. If you want a fun night in Hurst Street, you can't go far wrong with Missing.

Sidewalk Bar, Gay Village

A buzzing DJ bar in Birmingham, Sidewalk are known for their raucous weekend parties. From cool chesterfield sofas and leather padded bar fronts, to low lighting and exposed brick work, Sidewalk is a happy middle between modernity and traditional. For some of the best drinks deals in Birmingham head to 'Pounded' every Monday night.

Equator Bar, Gay Village

One of Hurst Street's quieter haunts, Equator is a welcoming venue that will leave you with warm feelings and happy memories. A relaxed and unpretentious bar, Equator offers patio bevies and a great atmosphere in this modern and intimate space at the top of Hurst Street.

Nightingale Club, Gay Village

If you're looking for one of the biggest and if not the best Gay clubs in Birmingham, then you've come to the right place. Infamous for their post-Pride parties, stilt walkers and fire breathers, there's no expense spared when it comes to this lively Hurst Street bar. From VIP booths to dapper drinks deals, everyone is catered for at Nightingale.
