OUT & ABOUT

What to do around ADGE

NEIGHBOURHOODS TO KNOW

You'll spot rainbow flags and encounter queer couples wherever you go in Sydney, but for a concentrated dose of the city's rainbow culture, a few neighbourhoods stand out. On the eastern fringe of the city centre, head to the adjoining suburbs of Surry Hills and Darlinghurst. Explore Oxford Street, which is lined with Sydney's biggest range of LGBTQIA+ nightlife venues and many other queer-focused businesses.

NIGHTLIFE

There are a raft of queer-focused venues in Sydney where you can raise a glass and meet like-minded souls. Just off Oxford Street in Surry Hills, The Beresford is a hub for well-dressed gay men, who enjoy lazy afternoons in the venue's courtyard before heading indoors to dance the night away. (Tip: the crowd is particularly gay on Sundays.) Nearby, Universal on Oxford Street in Darlinghurst is a thriving queer space with a diverse roster of events, from theatre and drag shows to full-on club nights. And the stalwart Oxford Hotel on Oxford Street in Darlinghurst is a multi-level rainbow utopia catering to all moods.

BEST OF MARDI GRAS

The Sydney Gay and Lesbian Mardi Gras festival is much more than just a parade: it's an entire season of celebration that locals affectionally refer to as 'gay Christmas'. Stretching across February and early March, the festival program includes dozens of unique events, from large-scale social gatherings to edgy theatre and dance performances.

Apart from the parade itself, the biggest event on the annual calendar is the family-friendly Fair Day, which takes place in Victoria Park near Newtown. Head along for live entertainment, a smorgasbord of stalls, fantastic people-watching and even a hotly contested dog show..

“If I wait for someone else to validate my existence, it will mean that I’m shortchanging myself.”
